NORTH MELBOURNE POLICE COURT

Thursday November 2.

CHARGE REDUCED.

Ralph David Smith, Ormond Gladstone Darling, and Reuben McInerney, were charged with housebreaking and stealing, but the charge was reduced to larceny.

Mr. T. Fogarty (Fogarty & McDonough) appeared for Smith and Darling.

Elizabeth Bradstreet -said that she kept a confectionary and tobacco shop in Abbotsford-st. On the 25th ult, she left her premises about 2 p.m. They were partially secured, the back door not being locked, but simply having a chair against it on the inside. When she returned at 5 p.m. she found a Mr. O'Keefe in the place, who told her she had been robbed. She found cigarettes and lollies missing to the value of 5/- or 6/-. Edward Francis O'Keefe said that he kept a bootshop in Abbotsford-st., two doors from that of the last witness. On 25th ult., at 3.30 p.m., he heard a noise in her shop.- He went into the right-of-way and saw Smith there. Witness walked up to her gate and found it open. Darling was looking out of the back window and McInerney was in the shop getting cigarettes. Witness came out of the shop, and they made a bolt, and got through the back gate. When witness got outside he saw that Smith had also disappeared.

Plain-clothes Constable Loorham said he and Plain-clothes Constable Nolan arrested Smith on Saturday last. At 2p.m. that day Darling came to the watchhouse and gave himself up. Plain-clothes Constable Nolan said that on Saturday evening he arrested McInerney.

The defence was that the shop had been practically left open, and constituted a temptation. They had entered the premises more in a spirit of fun than anything else -although no doubt reprehensible fun-but not with any felonious intent. Counsel said he did not think any good would be served by sending these youths to gaol. The whole thing was a piece of boyish escapade. The lads denied taking any cigarettes, although they admitted taking lollies. In answer to the bench, Inspector Costelloe said that Smith and McInerney had been fined on a former occasion for "two up" but there was nothing against Darling.

Smith and McInerney were each ordered to enter into £20 in themselves, and one surety of like amount to be of good behavior for twelve months, and a similar order was made in respect of Darling, but the sum was in his case £10, and the time six months.
