"5346 Pte Morris, T.F. 7th Battery. I beg to report that the marginally named man died in the Guard Room of this Unit at about 11.35, 3.11.18.

This man was brought into Camp about 2300, 2.11.18, by two Australian soldiers who reported that he was too tired to proceed to his camp, and asked permission for him to sleep here for the night. This was granted. Morris was quite sober when brought in, he slept well during the night and in the morning our C.A.M.C. Serg. saw him and gave him a tonic. He said he was better and would proceed to Camp at noon. The CSM offered him a lift in the car which was going in the direction of Heytesbury, but he refused saying he was well enough to ride his bicycle. I visited the Guard Room about 1000 and found Morris sleeping. At about 1130, the Police Corporal reported to me that Morris was showing signs of distress. I immediately proceeded to the Guard Room, and found him unconscious and breathing very feebly. I 'phoned for the nearest Civil Medical Practitioner as we have no M.O. in Camp, but was unable to get him, and was informed that he was out. I then phoned Sutton Veny Hospital for an ambulance and returned to the Guard Room. The man was dead. I ordered the Police Corporal to search his pockets and found his paybook bearing his particulars as noted. I then reported the matter to the A. P. M. Australians by 'phone and on his instructions handed the body together with his effects, over to Sutton Veny Hospital."

The deceased was buried from Sutton Veny Hospital at 1430 on 11th November, 1918, and interned in Sutton Veny Cemetery....."

The Commonwealth War Graves Commission cares for cemeteries and memorials in 23,000 locations, in 153 countries. In all 1.7 million men and women from the Commonwealth forces from WWI and WWII have been honoured and commemorated in perpetuity.

The Commonwealth War Graves Commission, as part of its mandate, is responsible for commemorating all Commonwealth war dead individually and equally. To this end, the war dead are commemorated by name on a headstone, at an identified site of a burial, or on a memorial. War dead are commemorated uniformly and equally, irrespective of military or civil rank, race or creed.

Not all service personnel have a Commonwealth War Graves Commission headstone. In some instances the relative chose to have their own memorial/headstone placed on the deceased's grave. These private headstones are not maintained by the CWGC as they have no jurisdiction to maintain them.

Gunner Thomas Frederick Morris has a Private Headstone.
