AMONG THE AUSTRALIANS

DEATH OF PRIVATE HECTOR ROGERS

The half-masting of the Shire Hall flag yesterday morning proclaimed that another of Coleraine's volunteers had become a sacrifice in the great war raging, although in this case it was illness and not fighting that led to his death. The victim was Private Hector Rogers, one of the comparatively recent batch of lads who left Coleraine to give their services for King and country. It appears that Private Rogers (son of Mr. James Rogers, and brother of Mr. Henry Rogers, who has received his discharge through disablement), was sent abroad, and having contracted pneumonia became a hospital inmate. Word received by his father showed that the complaint ended fatally.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

In honor of two fallen soldiers - Privates William Hector Rogers and Herbert Dugald Beaton - a memorial service was held yesterday morning at St. Andrew's Church. There was a large congregation and the Rev. J. Alexander gave an appropriate discourse. His subject was the Kingdom of Christ, and its establishment, he pointed out, rested on love and sacrifice. Wickedness was reigning, and, to defeat evil, men were dying. In such days as these it was, in the interests of those who suffered wrong, necessary to resist evil. The ultimate gain would come from men willing to lay down their lives.

It was his sad duty to speak of two of their soldiers who had laid down their lives. Private William Hector Rogers, after his brother had returned wounded from the landing at Gallipoli, heard his country's call, and enlisted last September. In due course he arrived in England, but catching a cold which developed into pneumonia he bore his illness without complaining, and died on the 23rd, January.

Private H. D. Beaton, who had spent most of his life at Wando Vale went into camp a year ago. He was sent to France about the 10th December, and in a little over seven months from his enlistment was sent into the firing line of the most dreadful war the world has even known. After five months in action he fell and met his death.

These two men, said the preacher, had each received a soldier's crown. They had laid down their lives for the weak and helpless, for the crushed and oppressed. " Whatsoever ye do unto one of these ye do it unto, Me." They remembered their noble and willing sacrifice with credit and love, and extended their sympathy to those who mourned their beloved. The hymns sung were appropriate.

Commonwealth War Graves Commission Headstones

The Defence Department, in 1920/21, contacted the next of kin of the deceased World War 1 soldiers to see if they wanted to include a personal inscription on the permanent headstone at Durrington War Graves Cemetery. Space was reserved for 66 letters only (with the space between any two words to be counted as an additional letter) & the rate per letter was around 3 ½ d (subject to fluctuation).

The expense in connection for the erection of permanent headstones over the graves of fallen soldiers was borne by the Australian Government.

(Information obtained from letters sent to next of kin in 1921)

Private H. W. Rogers does not have a personal inscription on his headstone. He also does not have the Christian cross on his headstone like so many other Australian soldiers.

Durrington Cemetery, Wiltshire, England

Durrington Cemetery contains burials of both wars. The 204 First World War burials were mostly from nearby Larkhill Camp. Many of the graves are of Australian servicemen and there is a separate Australian memorial in the cemetery. The Second World War burials number 22. In addition to the war graves, there are a number of post-war service graves in the cemetery, mostly of the Royal Air Force.
