Roy Allen SILLAR

Roy Allen Sillar was born on 1st February, 1895 in Dubbo, NSW to parents John Walker Sillar & Annie Isabel Sillar (nee Allen).

Roy Sillar graduated from the University of Sydney in 1917 with a Bachelor of Medicine (MB) & Master of Surgery (ChM).

Dr Roy Allen Sillar was a 23 year old, single, Medical Practitioner from Dubbo, NSW when he joined the Australian Imperial Force (A.I.F.) on 29th January, 1918. Roy Sillar had served as a Lieutenant in the 26th Infantry Regiment - 4 years in Militia. His religion was Presbyterian & his next of kin was listed as his father – John Walker Sillar, Bank of Australasia, Dubbo, NSW.

Captain Roy Allen Sillar embarked from Sydney on HMAT Commonwealth (A73) on 2nd March, 1918 with the Australian Army Medical Corp & disembarked at London, England on 13th May, 1918.

Captain Roy Allen Sillar was transferred to the Australian Army Medical Corp Training Depot on 14th May, 1918 & appointed Medical Officer at No. 3 Command Depot, Hurdcott located in the Salisbury Plain area in the county of Wiltshire.

Captain Roy Sillar was admitted to the Military Hospital at Fovant, Wiltshire on the afternoon of 30th June, 1918 after falling from a horse.

Captain Roy Allen Sillar died at 6.45 p.m. on 30th June, 1918 at the Military Hospital at Fovant, Wiltshire from concussion of the brain.

A death for Roy A. Sillar, aged 23, was registered in the September quarter, 1918 in the district of Wilton, Wiltshire.

A Court of Inquiry was held at No. 3 Command Depot, Hurdcott, Wiltshire on 1st July, 1918 into the death of Captain Roy Allen Sillar, presided over by Major A. L. Prince. The finding was that Captain Sillar had died accidentally by a fall from a horse.

The Court having assembled pursuant to order, proceed to take evidence:-

EVIDENCE

1st Witness Lieut. V.C. Sanders states:-

Capt Sillar and I were proceeding in the direction of Barford at about 3 p.m. yesterday, 30th June, on horse back. We met Capt Shaw A.A.M.C. and both dismounted to speak to him. After the conversation, we started to mount again. As I was about to mount, I heard a clatter of hoofs and looked round and saw Capt Sillar half mounted and trying to get his right leg over the saddle. The horse was moving forward suddenly, and moved about 6 yards with Capt Sillar still in the same position trying to get his leg over. He then succeeded but appeared to miss the stirrup on the off side, lost his balance and fell over the off side. He struck the ground with the left side of his face and head. I rushed up and was just picking him up when Captain Shaw came up and assisted me to lift him up and we took him to a house, where I left him with Capt. Shaw, while I went for an ambulance.

(Sgd) V.G. Sanders

2nd Witness Capt. R.M. Shaw A.A.M.C. states:-

While walking from Barford on the 30th June at about 3 p.m. I met Capt Sillar and Lieut. Sanders on horseback coming towards me. They dismounted and talked to me for a short time and then commenced to mount again. Capt Sillar being a little further down the road (a few yards) with Lt. Sanders horse between me and him, while saying good bye to Lieut. Sanders I heard the noise of the other horse (Capt. Sillar's) moving quickly and next saw Capt. Sillar rolling on the road. I rushed over and assisted Lieut. Sanders to move him into a house near by and I remained and attended him till Lieut. Sanders returned with an Ambulance, which was about ¾ hour after the occurrence. I went with Capt. Sillar to Fovant Military Hospital, and handed him over to Capt. Huntley. He began to lose consciousness on being moved into the ambulance. Capt. Sillar was perfectly sober at the time I met him.

(Sgd) R.M. Shaw. Capt.
A.A.M.C.

3rd Witness Capt. E. Huntley R.A.M.C. states:-

Capt. Sillar was brought to Fovant Military Hospital in an ambulance and admitted about 4.30 p.m. 30th June 1918. He was perfectly unconscious. On the left side of his head there was a very considerable bruising and a few superficial abrasions. On the right side just above the right ear there was a laceration of the scalp, surrounded by bruising. None of these wounds led down the bare bone. On the right hip also there was a very considerable bruise, and there were abrasions of the fingers of the right hand. He had no paralytic symptoms.

Capt. Sillar never regained consciousness and died about 7 p.m. on the same day. Cause of death was severe concussion of the brain. There were no signs of intoxication about Capt. Sillar.

(Sgd) E. Huntley. Capt.
R.A.M.C.

FINDING

The Court having duly considered the evidence finds:-

(1) That Capt. Sillar A.A.M.C. attached to No. 3 Command Depot Hurdcott, met his death on 30th June 1918, accidentally by a fall from a horse.

(2) That such accident was not caused by an neglect or misdemeanour on his part.

Captain Roy Allen Sillar was buried on 3rd July, 1918 at Compton Chamberlayne War Graves Cemetery – Back Row, Grave Plot #8. From the burial report of Captain Roy Allen Sillar – Coffin was good. Polished Elm. Brass Mountings – The late Captain Sillar was buried with full Military Honours, the body being conveyed to the graveside on a gun carriage, preceded by a firing party from the 2nd Australian Training Brigade and the Band of No 3 Command Depot. A. I. F.

Six Captains from No 3 Command Depot acted as Pall bearers.

Deceased's brother Cadet J. W. Sillar 3rd Bn and cousin Lieut. V. G. Sanders P.S.L. were chief mourners. About 50 Officers and 1000 N.C.O.'s and Men of No 3 Command Depot also attended the funeral.

A beautiful floral wreath from the Officers of No 4 Command Depot Headquarters was placed on the grave after the Last Post had been sounded.

The late Capt Sillar was very popular with all ranks and his loss is very keenly felt.

Captain Roy Allen Sillar requested in his Will, dated 1st March, 1918, that all his estate he leaves to his father John Walker Sillar & appointed his father as sole Executor of the Will.

Captain Roy Allen Sillar's Service Record contains several letters between the A.I.F., Dept of Defence & Imperial War Graves Commission trying to ascertain who holds the title deeds / burial rights in the grave of the late Captain R. A. Sillar. A letter to the Officer in Charge of Base Records, Melbourne from Mrs Sillars solicitors (A.J. Taylor, Sillar & Millet), dated 6th October, 1922, states that "Mrs Sillar does not hold any title deeds of the grave.....the burial was carried out by the Military Authorities at Fovant, England and that a monument was erected by the parents of the deceased soldier through H.A. Morgan & Sons, Monumental Masons, Frome, England."

Captain Roy Allen Sillar was entitled to British War Medal only as he had not entered a Theatre of War. A Memorial Scroll (July, 1921) & Memorial Plaque (December, 1922) were sent to Captain Sillar's mother (as his father had died in 1919) – Mrs Annie Sillar of 45 Reynolds St, Waterleigh, NSW

The Commonwealth War Graves Commission lists Captain Roy Allen Sillar, Australian Army Medical Corps. He was the son of Annie Isabel Sillar, of Dubbo, New South Wales, and the late John Walker Sillar.

Captain R. A. Sillar is commemorated in the Hall of Memory Commemorative Area at the Australian War Memorial, Canberra, Australia on Panel 183.

PERSONAL

Mr J. W. Sillar, manager of the Bank of Australasia (Dubbo), has received a cable message from England intimating that his second son, Dr Roy Allen Sillar, has been seriously injured whilst serving with the Australian Imperial Forces. Dr Sillar was for some five years a resident at St Andrew's College, within the Sydney University, and last year passed his final examinations for the degrees of Bachelor of Medicine and Master of Surgery. Dr Sillar afterwards passed through his hospital courses at St Vincent's Hospital and the Royal North Shore Sydney Hospital, and on March 3rd last he sailed from Sydney as a medical officer in charge of a unit for the front.

DR ROY ALLEN SILLAR

Meets With Serious Accident

Mr J. W. Sillar, manager of the Bank of Australasia (Dubbo), has received a cable message from England intimating that his second son, Dr Roy Allen Sillar, has been seriously injured whilst serving with the Australian Imperial Forces. Dr Sillar was for some five years a resident at St Andrew's College, within the University, and last year passed his final examinations for the degrees of Bachelor of Medicine and Master of Surgery. Dr Sillar afterwards passed through his hospital courses at St Vincent's Hospital and the Royal North Shore Sydney Hospital, and on March 3rd last he sailed from Sydney as a medical officer in charge of a unit for the front – "S.M. Herald."

Dr Sillar is a Dubbo native, and to most of its townspeople is as well known as the town clock; and they have watched his career with a personal interest. As a scholar at the Dubbo Public School he first attracted attention by being the Dux of the school two years in succession. His name appears on the Honor Board at the Mechanics Institute. At the age of 14 he took the scholarship for the State after his first year of technical instruction in chemistry, under the tuition of Mr E. Campling, now Inspector of Schools at Wellington. This was an exceptionally fine record for a boy. The promise that he gave at the Public School was later fully realised in all other examinations leading up to his medical course. For the matriculation in his Senior Exam, before entering the University he received honours in his two Maths., and in his classics (English, Latin and French). His University course is referred to in the paragraph from the "Herald."

Then came the call to serve the Empire, and he was prompt to respond. He had wanted badly to accompany his brothers, but all medical students were exempted, and he pushed through with his medical course. That much done, he left hot-footed for the front. And then the accident. Regarding this Mr J. W. Sillar informs us that he has not received any further information, and as the proverb has it, "No news is good news." Let us hope so.

DEATH OF SURGEON - CAPTAIN SILLAR

A private cable message has been received from England reporting the death of Surgeon – Captain Roy Allen Sillar, M.B., Ch. M. (Syd). He was only 23 years of age, and after completing his medical course at the Sydney University volunteered for active service with the Australian Imperial Forces in France. He left Sydney in March last as chief medical officer of a transport, and on reaching London joined the Australian Medical Corps, and shortly afterwards proceeded to France.

He was the second son of Mr J. W. Sillar, manager of the Bank of Australasia, Dubbo. Two of the late doctor's brothers are serving with the Australian Imperial Forces in Flanders – Mr Ralph Sillar, a solicitor, of this state and Mr J. W. Sillar, jun., under articles to Messrs M'Manamy and Jelf, solicitors, of Dubbo.

As a student of Sydney University, the late Dr Sillar passed through a distinguished course, and was elected senior scholar of St Andrew's College, within the University. Immediately before his departure he was one of the house surgeons at the Royal North Sydney Hospital and of St Vincent's Hospital.

DEATH OF SURGEON - CAPTAIN ROY ALLEN SILLAR

RESULT OF FALL FROM A HORSE

Little did the "Liberal" anticipate in its last issue that the result of the accident which befell Dr Roy Allen Sillar in England would cut short this promising young life. His father, Mr John Walker Sillar, manager of the Bank of Australasia, received the following cable, dated July 5th, on Saturday from his son, Signaller Jack Sillar:- "Roy's injuries fatal. Attended funeral yesterday, Sillar".

And Mr Andrew McCallum received the following wire from Colonel Sandford, Base Records Office, Victoria Barracks, Melbourne :- Captain Roy Allen Sillar, Army Medical Corps, died from concussion of brain, result of accident, 30/6/18. Please inform his father, J. W. Sillar, Bank of Australasia, Dubbo.

The shock to his devoted parents of this terribly sudden close to what promised to be a brilliant career is beyond the feeble power of any pen or tongue to describe. Only those who have lost a loved member of a happy family circle can understand their deep grief, "sorrowing most of all that they should see his face no more," and sympathise with them....To the secret grief of the Sillar family we pay our own tribute. The citizens of Dubbo, who knew Roy and watched with a semi-paternal interest in the youth's mental development, and the sturdy manner in which he climbed, rung by rung, the ladder of learning, feel keenly the loss of one who appeared destined to go far and achieve much. Citizens of every shade of thought and creed expressed the profoundest regret at the death of this youth, and condoled with the afflicted parents, who are prostrated with their grief. Letters and telegrams of sympathy have poured in from friends throughout the Commonwealth. And not a little sympathy is manifested for the dead soldier's two soldier brothers, bearing their sorrow so far away from their parents and homeland. Were they here it would soften the blow to their family, but there is this compensation – Roy did not die entirely amongst strangers, and his brother Jack was present at the graveside.

The gallant young Surgeon-Captain did not die in the field of battle, but his feet were directed thence in the merciful work of saving, not slaying.....

(The Dubbo Liberal and Macquarie Advocate, NSW – Tuesday 9th July, 1918)

Captain Roy Sillar's School Career.

On March 3rd, 1918, Surgeon-Captain Roy Allen Sillar, second eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Sillar, of the Bank of Australasia, Dubbo, sailed from Sydney as medical officer in charge of a unit for the front. It was the final step in a career which, from the day he entered the Dubbo District Public School as a chubby little boy, may be summed up in the one word, "Thorough." It was the keynote of his character, even as a boy, and when details come from Home we may feel sure that it characterised him till the light went out and he slept. He was a bright scholar, with a receptive and analytic mind. He absorbed facts as a sponge absorbs water, and with a little pressure he would exude information. At the age of 14 he established a school record which attracted attention not only in Dubbo, but far beyond its confines. In his first year of technical instruction in chemistry, under the tutelage of Mr. E. Campling, now. Inspector of Schools at Wellington, he won the scholarship for the State, an exceptionally fine record for a boy of that tender age. He was Dux of the school for two successive years, and his name occupies a conspicuous place on the Honor Board at the Dubbo Mechanics Institute. Thoroughness characterised his school career in his native town, and with that watchword on his lips he entered the Senior examination for, matriculation before entering the Sydney University. In that stiff examination he received honors in his two Maths., and in his Classics (English, Latin and French). For five years he toiled, like a galley slave at his studies as a resident student at St. Andrew's College, and in 1917 he passed his "finals," and secured his medical degrees with brilliant passes. During his University career he secured the Horn Scholarships Nos. 1 and 2 at St. Andrew's College and was also elected Senior Student of the College in 1917. When war broke out he wanted to interrupt his studies and leave for the front, at once with his two brothers, Jack and Ralph, but medical students are exempted, and perforce of this regulation he remained behind. As soon as he was free he lost no time with in linking up with the Army Medical Corps, and sailing where duty called and he felt he must go. And then the end as recounted above. He was a fine young man, honest, sterling, and true as steel. A true and worthy friend, a good and dutiful son, and as proud of his parents as they were of him. His is a dreadfully sad thing and the "Liberal" cannot find words to express to Mr. and Mrs. Sillar and the family its deep sense of the loss, they have suffered. The death of such a promising native of the town is a general loss and the grief felt is universal and sincere.

References at St. Andrew's.

Mr. McCallum, at all services on Sunday, made feeling reference to the death of Captain Roy Sillar. Speaking with deep emotion he said:

As a church and a community we have received a great loss through the tragic death of Dr. Roy Sillar. On that account we meet to-day under distressing circumstances. Owing to the lack of particulars, one cannot speak of the last scene in that useful and honorable life. Still, we have his splendid record to go by, which in every way enhances his value. Had he been privileged to reach his objective—the theatre of war—in a way the stroke would not have been so hard to bear; but to think he was suddenly cut off after travelling so far, and not permitted to yet to the storm centre, come with a pang of bitter disappointment to his many friends and particularly his parents. To have been killed in pursuance of his duties was some thing to be looked for, and needless to say his father and mother duly considered that side of the cast, but to fall as he has done is beyond our comprehension. That was entirely out of all reckoning. Notwithstanding his failure to reach France and minister to his stricken countrymen, in other sense he has attained his object, for he has given his life for humanity. He was fully identified with the righteous cause; in fact, all other things were subordinated to that end. Emoluments, love of ease, advancement in his noble profession, were not allowed to sway him, but head erect, breast forward, he went with a soul fired with a passion for men and the moral ideal, eager in every way to help his beloved land in her hour of need. His death has led him into union with the Great Sacrifice, and in measure helped to redeem mankind from the hand of the oppressor. We look through death to a great conclusion this life does not end all greater service in a higher sphere that awaits the brave and the good in the Land of Compensation. Having known him personally (many times he befriended me), one realises full well such is the position of the young doctor. His motive were pure, his service disinterested secures for him and all such a glorious reward. Humanly speaking, the whole affair, in its mysterious suddenness, is beyond our grasp, yet who knows best, and has called him into the Nearer Presence. With cheerful steps the path of duty run. God never does nor suffers to be done, But what you would yourself, could you but see. The end of all events as well as He.

The brevity of life does not detract from its worth; it is the quality alone that tells. That counts here and here after. As a church we are proud and privileged to have had such a fine specimen of manhood worship with us; any church might well envy us. As for the deceased doctor, his actions spoke eloquently for his parents. One only needs to enter such company to find that all that constitutes true life is to be found in such a home. The Sillar family, however sad, must have an inward satisfaction for that deep joy which comes from that actions, and is in accord with higher things is bound to be theirs to-day and for the remainder of their life. On behalf of the church and community I here convey to Mr. and Mrs. Sillar and family our sincere heartfelt sympathy, praying that. God may comfort and bless them all.
